Whilst we are undergoing significant transformations we are building on the wealth of experience and expertise of SW Battery who have been designing and manufacturing standby power systems for over 25 years. Now part of the Investx group, we have the resource and capability to advance its offering to incorporate the latest technology surrounding battery innovation.

These are exciting times and we would welcome feedback and input from our customers, to establish if we are providing the products that you and your clients require or whether there are any new battery chemistry technologies that you may require, such as Lithium Ion.
